Thursday, January 29 As a member of our community who is engaging in our nation's renewed hope and our cooperative efforts in lessening our carbon footprint, I'd like to recommend the services that the Center for Ecological Technologies, headquartered in Pittsfield, provides for all of us. I had no idea how much C.E.T. had to offer until I called for a free energy and weatherization audit last fall.

At the time of my appointment an employee spent at least two hours measuring where I had and didn't have insulation. He checked the efficiency of the furnace and water heater and replaced all the light bulbs with CFL bulbs (also without cost to me). He finished by giving me a printout of recommendations as well as the cost of further insulation that could be done by a professional contractor at an amazing 75 percent off of the cost which is absorbed by the utility company.

We decided to go forward with having the work done and paid a quarter of the total. C.E.T. then set everything in motion and made all of the arrangements with the contractors. After the work was completed there was another free follow-up visit to inspect the quality of the work.

We are not only pleased beyond belief with this wonderful service but we are enormously grateful that C.E.T. is available to anyone in our community to conserve energy, save money and to become more aware of our resources. And who could believe that it's so simple? Just call the Center for
